

Dordt University librarians' use of Instruct led to a 24% improvement in students' research skills and strengthened the relationship between the library and faculty.

Library director Jenni Breems and her team utilize Instruct to instill strong information literacy and research skills in their students. Using Instruct's assessment and reporting tools, they are able to show the value of library instruction to faculty and administrators.

The challenges of demonstrating the value of IL instruction

In 2014, in an effort to expand its information literacy instruction program, the library subscribed to Instruct. Prior to investing in Instruct and utilizing its analytics tool, Credo Insights, the library had not been able to collect empirical data to help promote the value of information literacy instruction to the faculty.

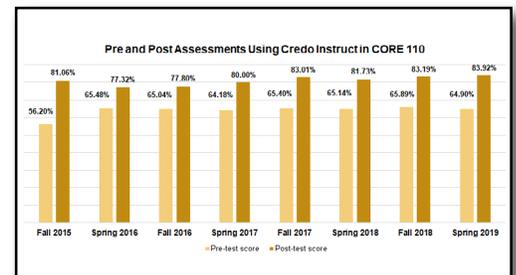

Utilizing platform features to support student and faculty needs

Since integrating Instruct into the CORE curriculum and introductory communications class (CORE 110), librarians have been able to show a 24% improvement from pre to post test assessments. Librarians have embedded Instruct's materials into their learning management system, Canvas, and faculty can use as needed. They also can provide links to relevant Instruct content, which faculty can easily add to their course pages or include in classroom instruction.

Through faculty collaboration in the CORE 110 and the pre- and post-test assessments, Breems and her team are able to continue to show the value of IL instruction and Instruct on campus.

"I appreciate Instruct's high-quality videos and tutorials as well as Credo's regular updates, keeping the content fresh and up-to-date."
