

FIVE WAYS TEACHERS CAN CELEBRATE NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK IN THEIR CLASSROOMS

ALTHOUGH WE HAVE PLENTY OF GOOD REASONS TO APPRECIATE THE LIBRARIES AND LIBRARIANS IN OUR SCHOOLS AND COMMUNITIES EVERY DAY, NATIONAL LIBRARY WEEK IS A PERFECT TIME TO REINFORCE THE VALUE WE PUT ON THIS VALUABLE INSTITUTION AND THE PEOPLE WHO MAKE SUCH A DIFFERENCE IN OUR CHILDREN'S LIVES.

1

Take students on a tour of the school library, and remind them that librarians can help them with so many things that they are working on throughout the school year.

Plan an online library visit, if you can't go in person—visit their website or social media pages, where students can learn about their programs, services, and resources (like Learn360).

2

3

Prompt students to reflect on why their library is important to them—and consider posting their responses where they can be shared and appreciated.

Invite your librarian in to speak with the class. Have your students each think of one question to ask.

4

View Learn360's videos and clips related to libraries, including:

- Libraries from LeVar Burton Kids
- Writing, Libraries, & Internet: Origins—The History of Everything! from Bellum Entertainment
- Using the Catalogue from ClickView
- Horse-Riding Librarians from Makematic
- Franklin's Library Book: Franklin the Turtle from Nelvana
- DESKERCISE: National Library Week (MONDAY) from Slim Goodbody
- Library of Congress from History Education

AND MORE!

HORSE-RIDING LIBRARIANS

5

LEARN MORE ABOUT LEARN360 HERE!

